Department of Microbiology & Biotechnology

Quiz Competition on the occasion of World Malaria Day (Malaria Week Celebration 1st -7th May, 2022). Alphonse Laveran was born in Paris on June 18, 1845. In 1874, at age 29, after a competitive examination ("aggregation") he was appointed professor of military diseases and epidemics at the School of Military Medicine of Val-de-Grâce in Paris. The military hospital in Constantine (Algeria), where Laveran discovered the malaria parasite in 1880. Laveran, for his part, used observations from his work in anatomic pathology – deaths due to malaria were frequent – to guide his search for the causal agent of malaria. By studying the lesions in organs and in blood in two very different clinical situations, severe attacks and chronic malaria, Laveran found that the only constant element was the presence of granules of black pigment in the blood.

The main aim of the Quiz competition was to motivate students and aware them about its spread and vector. Make them aware about the preventive measures of Malaria.
